Connie Mack's system of resting his regulars during the first part of this week game series with the Yankees at top speed is expected to put the champions on edge for the series with the Giants. The regulars are not absolutely idle these days, for they are taking daily practice at Shibe Field, though they are not doing any strenuous work. But in the games against the Yankees the team is going to make an effort to play its best ball and work hard, so that it will be ready for the opening game in New York next Tuesday. It is unfortunate for Frank Chance that he must finish with the champions, who will use their best pitchers against him, Washington. thus making the Yankees' chances for tinishing out of last place rather slim.

The uncertainty of base ball was once more demonstrated yesterday when a team made up of youngsters of little experience gave the Nationals, with their best pitcher on the rubber, a hard struggle. But one run was scored by the perience gave the Nationals, with their locals, and this did not come until the seventh inning. On the face of the lineup which Mack presented, and with the he Nationals, it looked like 20 to 1 against the visitors, yet it was just about Il the locals could do to win the game. Johnson, of course, did not exert himself. He loafed most of the day, and did not use a single curve ball. Once or twice when the Mack rookies threatened Walter was forced to cut loose, and when he did the side was retired without much
